1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Weisser, Jr. et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,600,710).

Regarding claim 1, Weisser, Jr. et al. teach an intelligent network (Fig. 3) comprising:

a service switching point (Fig. 3, 15 or 15') connected to a telephone (18 or 18'); a service control point (26) constructed and arranged to provide at least one call service on demand, said service control point 26 being connected to said service switching point 15 or 15'; and a peripheral apparatus (39) constructed and arranged to permit customization of the manner in which an end user interacts with the service control point 26 so that a user using said telephone 18 or 18' can access said at least one call service, said peripheral apparatus 39 being connected to at least one of said service switching point 15 or 15' and said service control point 26 (column 7, lines 34-49).

Art Unit: 2642

Regarding claim 2, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said service switching point and said service control point are connected by an out-of-band signaling network (column 10, lines 20-22).

Regarding claim 3, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said peripheral apparatus is connected to at least one of said service switching point and said service control point by said out-of-band signaling network (column 10, lines 27-38).

Regarding claim 4, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said out-of-band signaling network is a Signaling System 7 network (column 10, lines 8-10).

Regarding claim 5, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said peripheral apparatus is connected to said service switching point and said peripheral apparatus is connected to said service control point by way of said service switching point (column 9, lines 42-53).

Regarding claim 6, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said peripheral apparatus is connected to said service switching and said peripheral apparatus is connected to said service control point by way of said service switching point (column 10, lines 39-60).

Regarding claim 7, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said peripheral apparatus is constructed and arranged to collect information from the user needed for providing said at least one call service (column 5, lines 1-21).

Regarding claim 8, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said information from the user is in the form of at least one of: DTMF tones, analog pulses, and verbalized speech (column 5, lines 6-8).

Art Unit: 2642

Regarding claim 9, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said peripheral apparatus is constructed and arranged to provide customized information to the user in connection with providing the said at least one call service (column 9, lines 37-40).

Regarding claim 10, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said customized information provided to the user is in the form of at least one of customized recorded messages and customized spontaneously-generated speech (column 10, lines 57-61).

Regarding claim 11, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said spontaneously-generated speech comprises concatenated strings of recorded speech segments (column 10, lines 32-37).

Regarding claims 12 and 13, see column 8, lines 46-67.

Regarding claim 14, Weisser, Jr. et al. further teach the network wherein said customized information comprises verbal information having a form depending on the user's geographic location (column 9, lines 34-41).

3. Claims 15-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Cookson (U.S. Patent No. 5,889,848).

Regarding claims 15 and 16, see column 5, line 4 through column 6, line 46.

Regarding claim 17, Cookson teaches a method of permitting customized end-user interaction with a call service in an intelligent network, comprising:

collecting user input information needed to establish the call service (column 4, lines 24-25);

Art Unit: 2642

providing the collected user inputs to a service control point associated with the call service (column 4, lines 28-30); and outputting information associated with the call service in a manner customized with respect to a given user (column 4, lines 28-32).

Regarding claim 18, Cookson further teaches the method wherein collecting user input information comprises collecting one or more of DTMF tones, analog pulses, and verbalized speech (column 2, lines 32-35).

Regarding claim 19, Cookson further teaches the method wherein outputting information comprises outputting at least one of a recorded message and spontaneously-generated speech (column 4, lines 1-12).

Regarding claim 20, Cookson further teaches the method wherein outputting spontaneously-generated speech comprises concatenating a string of recorded speech segments (Fig. 10).

Regarding claim 21, Cookson further teaches the method wherein outputting information associated with the call service in a manner customized with respect to a given user comprises outputting information having a form corresponding to the given user's geographic location (column 5, lines 4-29).
